FULL DETAILS MAY JUSTIFY 'SMACK' RAID

BULLETIN
Seoul, Saturday, Jan. 31.—(AP)—Gen. James A. Van Fleet said today it was "grossly unfair" to describe "Operation Smack" as anything but a soundly conceived and carefully planned combat operation.

Seoul (AP)—The Army said today that last Sunday's "Operation Smack" raid in Western Korea, which aroused a storm of criticism in the U. S. Congress—would win only praise "when the full story is told."

The Army did not say when it could disclose the full story, but respondents were obtaining information from various sources, including the commander of the U. S. 7th Division which made the raid.

However, there was some confusion. Capt. Clair M. Wolfe of Omaha, Neb., division public information office, said tonight he held that post. Earlier he had been relieved.

Wolfe was in charge of press coverage of the raid on Spud Hill. The Chinese stopped the attack and after weathering an intensive aerial and artillery pounding.

Some lawmakers seemed convinced that American soldiers had been exploited to put on a performance for the top brass.

While the Army would release casualty figures for the operation, it was learned that three U. S. soldiers were killed and 87 wounded, of the 150 men in the raid force. Of the wounded, 57 were hurt so slightly they returned to duty next day.

Criticism developed over the distribution of operational plans of the raid to generals and news correspondents invited to watch the action.

The U. N. Command in Tokyo said troops of the U. S. 7th Division carried out the planned attack in co-ordination with artillery, tanks and warplanes.

Invited generals and war correspondents watched while the infantrymen, following up heavy bombardment and fire-bomb attack on the hill, slugged to within 5 yards of the crest, then were topped off by deadly Red crossers and hand grenades.

A correspondent, Forrest Edwards, one of those who watched the fight, said three Americans were killed and a few were wounded seriously. The Army would announce no casualty figures but said at least 60 per cent of those wounded returned to duty the next day.

About 150 troops made the attack behind a barrage laid down by massed artillery, 15 tanks and some 40 planes.

FATHER OF STEELER PLAYER FOUND DEAD

Pittsburgh (AP)—Peter Ladygo, 66-year-old father of Peter, Jr., a guard for the Pittsburgh Steelers professional football team, was found dead of a heart attack today in his Pittsburgh home.

An autopsy was ordered to determine the cause of death after officials learned he was treated a few hours previously for a blow on the head. Dr. R. C. Hamilton, coroner's physician, established the cause of death after learning the head cut required only three stitches. The coroner's office said the blow was inflicted during an altercation with his wife, Emma, 64. He was hit on the head with a juice extractor.

March on Polio Nets Almost $4,000 in Borough and County

Bringing home the bacon in the form of almost $4,000 worth of jangling dimes and dollars in last night's Mother's March on Polio, Warren county's volunteer brigade is credited by Zonta Club members with a tremendous job well done.

Working until nearly midnight in the city building to complete the tally of coins collected by the Mothers teams, Zonta officers report a total of $2,498.34 for Warren borough and $1,309.62 for surrounding communities for a grand total of $3,807.96 for the evening's efforts.

This amount, added to the total previously reported by Treasurer Ann McGary, brings the present total of the 1953 March of Dimes to $6,959.88.

There are still some rural communities to be heard from in the Mothers March and several special gifts have been promised, Zonta officials report today. Any persons who were missed in the house to house canvass or have neglected to send in their contributions may still do so by mailing them to Mrs. (Turn to Page Twelve)

Traditional Fourth of July Celebration for Warren This Summer Mapped by Jaycees

A Fourth of July observance starting on Friday evening, July 3rd, including the traditional fireworks and "grand finale" Saturday evening, and perhaps outdoor religious service Sunday, was tentatively discussed for Warren this summer when Jack Barr and his Jaycees committee held a meeting in the American Legion Home last evening.

The small group in attendance agreed that the program will follow along lines similar to other years, but with an effort being made to make it more compact.

This year it is possible that an effort will be made to have at least two champion drum corps units from both the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars organizations from the states of Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York, with the object in view of having it one of the most outstanding exhibits of its kind ever offered in the eastern section of the country. This would be accomplished by contacting commanders of both the Legion and VFW in the three states, early enough to make it possible to extend individual invitations to the champion corps. It was also decided to increase the prize money for this year's competition.

The Saturday program would consist of the usual spectacular parade in the morning, drum corps competition in the afternoon and a fireworks display in the evening to excel anything ever offered before.

New ideas for the selection and coronation of the Celebration Queen are to be adopted and a committee will soon be at work mapping plans for this important event which will take place on Friday evening, July 3, to be followed by the traditional street dance.

It was announced that the Seneca Indians are anxious to return to Warren this year for a lacrosse game which has proven so popular during recent celebrations.

Governor Fine Holds Out Hopes 1953 Legislature Will Not Be "Marathon"

Harrisburg (AP)—Gov. John S. Fine held out hope today that the 1953 Legislature will not approach in length the marathon 1951 session although he declared flatly that neither an income nor a sales tax can be passed.

The governor said the session will not last too long if "the legislators follow a logical plan and determine within a reasonable time the appropriations they will pass."

"Knowing then what they are going to spend," he said, "they can proceed with a tax program to take care of needed revenue."

Fine had indicated previously that he will leave the job of raising new revenue to the Legislature. In his budget message to the General Assembly he said an additional 157 million dollars in new revenue will be needed.

The governor said at a news conference yesterday that a bloc of Democrats and some insurgent Republicans would be sufficient to block board-based levies in the House.

Turning to another group—the Chesterman Committee which is studying possible economies in the state government—Fine said that recommendations of this committee, if adopted, would save a total of 50 million dollars through the next eight years.

"I will go as far as I possibly can in adopting the committee's proposals," Fine said.

He pointed out, however, that he wants to consider the complete reports including data on which the reports are based before taking any action.

The committee's suggestions include reorganizing the Mines Department as a division of Labor and Industry and transferring functions of the State Internal Affairs Department to other departments with eventual abolishment of Internal Affairs. A total of 16 out of 30 projected reports have been issued.

Fine said he anticipated a "lot of opposition" to the recommended consolidation of the State Fish and Game Commissions with the Forests and Waters Department. Abandonment of state-owned hospitals, teachers colleges and the Mines Department also appeared unpopular, he said.

Latest Frigid Blast Will Last a Few Days

Pittsburgh—Winter's latest deep freeze in Western Pennsylvania is expected to thaw out in a few days.

Temperatures which plummeted to zero at Philadelphia and nine degrees at Brookville last night are expected to rise tonight to the high 20's and reach the 40's tomorrow.

Two Charged With Topsy Driving Are Given Jail Terms

Two Warren residents, Curtis Uplinger and Joseph Ulrich, and a Corry man, Vernon M. Church, each was sentenced to pay costs of prosecution, a $100 fine, and to serve 10 days in County Jail, when they were brought before Judge Allison Wade this morning to answer to the charge of driving while intoxicated.

Uplinger, it will be remembered, ran into nine different cars on Warren streets, December 21, before he was arrested and declared to be under an intoxicant. Before he was sentenced today, Uplinger's counsel advised the Court that while insurance carried by Uplinger did not provide coverage for the damage he had inflicted, he had borrowed money to pay the owners whose cars he had struck, and that full payment has been made.

The Commonwealth asked a continuance of the case of Wade S. Henry of Youngsville, also charged with drunken driving, and the case of E. F. Tome of Corydon, charged with a game law violation. James Hook, charged with burglary and larceny, did not appear in court having been committed to Warren State Hospital for from 30 to 60 days as the result of a petition asking psychiatric attention.

Alfred M. Gertsch, charged with driving during a period of license suspension, was fined $100, costs of prosecution and ordered to spend 25 days in County Jail.

Judge Wade disposed of seven non-support cases this morning and in one of these he levied a 30-day jail sentence for contempt of court in disregarding a support order.

Ten juvenile cases were to come before the Court this afternoon.

BOY HANGING VICTIM
Altoona (AP)—Ten-year-old Fred Dennis McCaulley was found hanging in the cellar of his home last night shortly after he was told to turn off the television set. Deputy Coroner William Crawford started an investigation to determine if the hanging was accidental.

SUICIDE OF DIPLOMAT IS CAUSING STIR

Washington (AP)—The State Department will be asked to tell Congress what it has learned in an investigation of the death of John C. Montgomery, of Chambersburg, Pa.

Montgomery was head of the department's Finnish desk when he apparently hanged himself from a stair rail in his fashionable Washington home early last Saturday.

Rep. Brownson (R-Ind), chairman of a House government operations subcommittee which handles State Department matters, said yesterday he would ask Secretary of State Dulles at once for a full report.

The State Department investigated the death as a routine procedure since Montgomery had access to secret documents.

Brownson acted after Rep. Busbey (R-Ill), in a House speech yesterday, said "there are many questions that remain unanswered."

Busbey indicated he was far from satisfied with explanations that Montgomery was despondent because he was lonely and unmarried and discontented with his job.

Busbey said the State Department and police have surrounded the case with "mystery and secrecy" but the public is entitled to know the truth because Montgomery held an important and confidential position and handled secret government documents.

F. Joseph Donohue, one of three commissioners who govern the District of Columbia, said there was no mystery as far as he was concerned.

Police Chief Robert V. Murray said there was no note.

Harmony Jamboree For Scout Fund In Sheffield Saturday

With such marvelous reports regarding the entertainment provided in Warren a week ago, residents of Sheffield are all agog over their own Harmony Jamboree at 8:15 p. m. Saturday in the Sheffield High school auditorium when the same program given in Warren last Friday and Saturday will be presented in Sheffield.

These benefit Jamborees, arranged for the Warren County SPBBSQA, are for the benefit of the Jamboree fund of Warren County Council, Boy Scouts of America, to help finance the sending of a troop of 39 boys to the annual event in California next summer. James A. Blomquist of North Warren, Jamboree committee chairman, said today that while the local Council is allotted 39 boys, 24 have already signed up and there is a definite possibility that the lists may be closed at any moment by National headquarters.

He urges all leaders to make registrations for their entrants at once. On tomorrow night's program at Sheffield will be numbers by the Warren Chapter Chorus, including "Indian Maid" to which Miss Phoebe Jewell adds beauty and rhythm with an Indian dance; the Maestros of Youngsville; the SPBBS Squads from Cambridge Springs; the Jolly Boys, including their 430-pound tenor, from East Liverpool, Ohio; the Dynachords of Erie; and the famous Chord Cadets of Warren.

Sheffield Scouters who attended Thursday night's testimonial dinner in Warren reported that a full house is expected.

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO LASSO BLAZING WELL ABOARD A MOTOR VESSEL

in the Gulf of Mexico (AP)—A third attempt will be made today to lasso the top of a blazing gas well in a maneuver that almost killed one firefighter.

Alfred M. Gertsch, charged with driving during a period of license suspension, was fined $100, costs of prosecution and ordered to spend 25 days in County Jail.

Judge Wade disposed of seven non-support cases this morning and in one of these he levied a 30-day jail sentence for contempt of court in disregarding a support order.

MANY AWARDS ARE MADE AT SCOUT RECOGNITION DINNER

Interesting Talk Is Delivered By Ohio Executive

Presented with the Silver Beaver award, highest honor a Scouter may attain, Carl Jones was honored at Thursday night's annual recognition dinner of Warren County, Boy Scouts of America, in appreciation of his many years' work in behalf of the Council. Guest speaker for the evening was Harry Hunter, Scout Executive in Ashtabula.

At the dinner, in Beatty gymnasium, retiring Commissioner Cecil C. Winans also was honored for his untiring endeavor, and Training Chairman John Kirk presented the Scouter awards to Richard Moll and Fred Watt.

A advancement Chairman William Hill proudly introduced this year's Eagle Scout, Richard Moll, and the Eagle Scouters, Richard Bloss, Rae Seeley, David Lindberg, Richard Koebley, and Clark Groesch. Jerry McConnell now residing in Council Bluffs, Ia., also became an Eagle here during the past year. "These are the boys and the man who had the courage to forge ahead," said Mr. Hill.

NUMBER, PLEASE!
Guests at the recognition dinner saw entirely new faces when the waitresses started to serve the dinner, prepared by the Lewis Caterers. While they may have been "Bizz-zee" in bringing out the food, there were no wrong numbers. The waitresses were all operators at the local office of the Bell Telephone Company.

Mr. Hill pointed with pride to the fact that the 1951 Eagles are "still sticking to Scouting" and becoming leaders in their various units. He asked seven of them to stand, Robert Koebley, Lewis Garber, Richard Sherwood, Charles Smith, Frank Moore, William Wehner and Robert Barhite. The other two, Clark Wright and William Glassman, are in college.

Mr. Hill said that these Eagle Scouts are at the end of the trail in Scouting and are now ready to become leaders. Before reading "A Dad and His Lad," he said that the invisible qualities of an Eagle Scout, "the lights within a person," are honor, duty, God, obey, trustworthy, loyal and kind.

The big gymnasium presented a festive scene as the almost 250 (Turn to Page Seven)

Fire Department At Clarendon Receives A Surprise Check

Under the guidance of Fire Chief Leonard Falbriski, hundreds of residents from Clarendon borough and surrounding area attended the Clarendon Fire Department's open house held last evening in the newly-decorated headquarters of the fire-fighting unit.

Main attraction of the evening was the new American-LaFrance combination pumper, hose car, and high pressure booster. The new piece of fire apparatus, which arrived only last week, drew many complimentary remarks from the crowd. Explaining the operating procedure of the new truck were Firemen Robert Bullock, Frank Shaner, Earl Nollinger and Bert Arbogast.

Also on display was the department's new pnculator, their (Turn to Page Twelve)

HEART ATTACK FATAL TO ROBT. H. TRUSLER

Robert H. Trusler of 19 Water street, well known Warren grain and feed dealer, dropped dead in his store on Water street near Pennsylvania avenue, about 2 p. m. today.

Mr. Trusler, one of Warren's best known residents, had been shoveling snow at his home just a few minutes before his death. He leaves his wife, Anne; one daughter, Mrs. Quentin Holt; and one brother, Howard, of Warren.

Word of Mr. Trusler's death was regrettably received by The Times-Mirror but a few minutes before press time. An obituary will be published on Monday.

PRICE OF VICTORY—While President Dwight Eisenhower, top, must meet tense moments in his new job as president, defeated Adlai Stevenson, bottom, completely relaxes during his vacation at Barbados, British West Indies. The Illinois ex-governor has commented that he doesn't envy the president at all in winning the nation's top post.

Foremost American Business Man In Portugal, Born in This City, Is Dead

Born in Warren 70 years ago and for many years one of the foremost American businessmen in Portugal, Ralph Emil Gruber died in Lisbon today, according to an Associated Press dispatch received by the Times-Mirror.

Besides his immediate family, Mr. Gruber has several relatives in this section. He was a son of the late Albert and Mary (Schultz) Gruber, and Mrs. Salome Huck of Jackson Run Road, aged 96, is an aunt, being a sister of Mr. Gruber's father. Mrs. Anna Arnold, 14 Madison avenue, and Oswald Gruber of Lander, are cousins, as is Mrs. James Wolf of Elmira, N. Y.

In Portugal, Mr. Gruber leaves his wife, Belle, a daughter, Mrs. Edmundo Perio, and five grandchildren. One sister, Mrs. Evelyn Spencer of Napa, Cal., and a brother, Elmer Gruber, also living in California, survive him.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Gruber visited their Warren county relatives last August. They left here for California where they spent two months during which time Mr. Gruber underwent an operation, returning to Portugal December 1. In a subsequent letter, he wrote his cousins that they would remain in Portugal to be near their daughter, Gertrude, and would not again return to the United States.

In addition to being president of the American Tin Company, Belmonte, Portugal, Mr. Gruber was vice president of the House of Portugal, Inc., and of the world-famous Madeira Wine Company of San Francisco. He left Warren when about 15 years of age and was employed by a tin company in California, rising from a menial position to prominence.

The funeral will be held at the Scots' Church in Lisbon. Commitment will be in the Estoril Cemetery, near Lisbon.

Cardinals' Owner Facing Prison Term Sells Stock in Club

New York (AP)—Fred Saigh, St. Louis Cardinals' owner facing a 15-month prison term for evasion of income tax, pulled out of baseball today and announced he would sell his stock in the club as soon as possible.

After an hour and a half meeting with Baseball Commissioner Ford Frick and National League President Warren Giles, Saigh announced a special trustees' committee would be set up to run the club until he can sell his stock.

He said he himself would appoint the committee Feb. 22 and he promised it would be made up of "civic minded St. Louisians, acceptable to the commissioner and the National League."

Frick and Giles stood at the shoulders of the little club executive (Turn to Page Twelve)

No Struggle Between Ike and Congress on "Streamlining"

Washington (AP)—The White House says no struggle is developing today between President Eisenhower and Congress over procedure in streamlining the government.

A change in voting rules recommended by Senate and House committees would make it easier for Congress to veto presidential reorganization moves.

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty disclosed yesterday that Eisenhower knew in advance of the planned change—and was agreeable to it. Hagerty said there is no conflict of view on the point.

He told reporters congressional leaders informed the President Monday that the voting procedure on reorganization acts probably would be revised. Hagerty said the President was not opposed.

Unexplained, however, was the testimony of Joseph M. Dodge, di-

START TRIP AFTER WHITE HOUSE VISIT

Washington (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles and Foreign Aid Chief Harold Stassen left on a special mission to Europe today, carrying with them some last-minute "suggestions and guidance" from President Eisenhower.

Traveling aboard Eisenhower's official plane, a four-engine Constellation—the two took off from Washington airport at 9:26 a. m.

Before their return, Feb. 9, Dulles and Stassen are due to visit the capitals of seven West European nations.

The two chief architects of this nation's foreign affairs program breakfasted with the President before driving to the airport.

Before leaving, Dulles handed newsmen a statement which seemed to soften somewhat the criticism he voiced earlier this week of the slowness of West Europe in bringing about a unified defense program.

He said the European Defense Community had been "developed by the Europeans themselves with great courage and imagination as a step toward that unity which all recognize as necessary."

In a radio-television address Tuesday night, Dulles had said it might be necessary for this nation to "rethink" its foreign aid policies unless Western Europe got together and agreed on a program of unification—military as well as economic.

Stassen said he was confident that the mission which he and Dulles are undertaking "will be a constructive opening move" in the work of the Eisenhower administration in foreign affairs.

As Dulles and Stassen left the White House meeting with the President, Eisenhower called out: "Good luck to you both. Have a nice trip. Think of me when I'm out there sweating Monday morning."

This was reference to the fact that he will deliver to Congress Monday, in person, a State of the Union message.

Dulles and Harold E. Stassen, new boss of foreign aid in the Eisenhower administration took off in President Eisenhower's plane. They will go first to Rome, then to Paris and London and successively on to Bonn, West Germany; capital; The Hague, The Netherlands; Brussels, Belgium; and Luxembourg. They are due back in Washington Feb. 9.

The trip is being made at the direction of Eisenhower, earlier announcements said, to gather information on political trends, "particularly those connected with the defense buildup and related economic factors."

Senate Action On More Appointments Is Scheduled Today

Washington (AP)—With the Senate Foreign Relations Committee worrying over how to handle two of President Eisenhower's top diplomatic appointments, three others came up for Senate action today.

Chairman Wiley (R-Wis) of the committee predicted the three would be confirmed quickly. They are:

Mrs. Oswald E. Lord of New York, to be U. S. representative on the United Nations Human Rights Commission, succeeding Mrs. Franklin D. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Winthrop W. Aldrich of New York, to be ambassador to Great Britain, succeeding Walter S. Gifford.

Herman Phleger of California, to be legal adviser to the State Department, succeeding Adrian S. Fisher.

Meadville and Oilers Battle For League Lead; Dragons To Play in Franklin Tonight

The Section Two cage conference is due to take on a "new look" tonight, when teams sharing three two-way deadlocks challenge each other.

Most important of them all is the contest slated between defending champion Meadville High and the Oil City Oilers. Both undefeated in league competition with four victories, the two will stage the battle of the court at Oil City.

Next in line, but first in the minds of local fans, will be the Warren High Dragons journey to Franklin, where the Nurserymen have accounted for a similar 2-2 loop record with the Massmen. Rounding out tonight's encounters are Corry and Titusville, who meet on Colestock High hardwood in Titusville.

These tilts round out the first half of league play and will make a six-step ladder out of the standings.

With a three-game losing streak behind them, the Dragons should be ready to bounce back into the win column at Franklin and strengthen their league standing as well as the faltering 8-6 season record.

KNOW YOUR STATE

(Prepared for the Warren Times-Mirror by State Planning Board, Department of Commerce)

TO PROTECT OUR FORESTS

Data released by the Forest Service of the U. S. Department of Agriculture presents a very favorable picture of protection provided for the forests of Pennsylvania by the Division of Protection of the State Department of Forests and Waters.

Comparisons with conditions of 1939 show that in that year 85,657 forest fires occurred on protected lands in the United States and that in 1950, 96,578 fires occurred on such land, while in Pennsylvania, which had 4,768 forest fires on protected areas in 1939, there were only 910 reported fires in 1950.

The forest areas burned off on protected land in the United States totalled 3,266,000 acres in 1939 and 3,407,000 acres in 1950, an increase of approximately 140,000 acres, while in Pennsylvania the area burned over in 1950 declined to approximately half that reported in 1939, the exact figures being 36,775 acres in 1950 as compared with 72,170 in 1939.

The dollar value of damage to the forests in the United States had doubled between 1939 and 1950, while in Pennsylvania it declined from $190,000 in 1939 to $81,000 in 1950.

While it is true, the State Planning Board of the Pennsylvania Department of Commerce points out, that conditions of weather, such as the prevalence of drought or the abundance of rain, have an inevitable effect on fire damage to the forests and that a comparison of one state with the nation for any single year may be relatively unfair, it is nevertheless true that the protection of Pennsylvania forest land—one of our state's most valuable long-term assets—presents a highly favorable picture as compared with the record in many other states and with the nation as a whole.

The comparison of the cost of forest fire protection in Pennsylvania with that in most of our neighboring states is also a tribute to the efficiency of our protective services. That cost in Pennsylvania is only 63c per acre of forest land. In some of our Western states it rises as high as 75c an acre (So California), and even in the East, Pennsylvania is among the very lowest states in estimated cost of the fire protection now being provided to this important natural resource.

HEART FUND DRIVE NEXT

With a goal of $200,000, the Western Pennsylvania Heart Association's 1953 Heart Fund Drive is planning another heavy blow against heart disease when the month-long campaign opens on February 1st.

The fight against heart disease goes on day in and day out all year long," said Campaign Chairman, John W. Kossin, who is vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank, Pittsburgh Branch.

Statistics show that heart disease is the nation's number one killer. Last year, more than 763,000 persons in the United States died of diseases of the heart and circulation.

"That figure is double the number of American boys who died in World War II, which lasted for six years," said Mr. Kossin.

Each county chapter belonging to the Western Pennsylvania Heart Association is prepared to carry the fight against heart disease to its local community through the use of plastic heart coin collectors, tag days, school banks, industry solicitations, personal and house-to-house collections.

"No one is safe from heart disease," he added, "because this terrible killer has no respect for age, religion, color, occupation or geographic location."

The greatest portion of the money collected in Western Pennsylvania remains in the area, it was stated.

Heart Fund contributions have made possible a heart clinic at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh, which is available to all residents of Western Pennsylvania. In the past, children who required special service or care had to be sent to either Philadelphia or Cleveland.

Heart Fund contributions also support and maintain a Cardiac Evaluation Clinic at the Falk Clinic in Pittsburgh to which residents of the Western Pennsylvania area may be referred by their doctor. At this clinic, a person suffering from heart disease is examined, tested, and advised as to his work capabilities.

GROUNDHOG A PHONY WEATHERMAN

Scientific research has refuted the famed weather myth that when the groundhog sees his shadow on February 2nd there's a long winter ahead. The pure and simple truth of the matter, reveals the current issue of People Today Magazine, is that the groundhog is a phony.

Experiments have shown that most wild groundhogs are sound asleep on February 2nd, weather or no, and they don't arise 'til early March. The groundhog is actually a sluggish animal, a little on the stupid side, and doesn't even know when he's casting a shadow. Lab tests have determined that several minutes of continuous exposure to loud noises, heat or light, will wake the groundhog from deep hibernation at any time during the winter season, and weather is no factor at all.

The only animal with a day all its own marked off on the calendar, the groundhog is no spring prophet, continues the article. Every Groundhog Day for 25 years, thirty or more Boy Scouts have stood 8-hour groundhog-hole watch, and no groundhog has ever appeared, although the weather varied greatly. Talks with zoo keepers, scientific staffs and other experts show that this animal knows less than nothing about the day that honors him, concludes the author.

DOUBLE DEADLINE

Midnight tomorrow, January 31, makes a traditional double deadline for Pennsylvania's motorists.

For after that hour, their 1952 operators' license cards are no good. The inspection stickers on their windshields, if placed there longer ago than November 1, 1952, are invalid, also.

In a report to Otto F. Messner, state secretary of revenue, the Bureau of Motor Vehicles today revealed that 3,736,910 drivers' licenses for 1953 already have been mailed out, leaving about 254,974 persons who have not yet taken care of their driving privilege credentials for this year.

The secretary cautions motorists that there would be no extension of the expiration date either for drivers' cards or inspection stickers.

Here And There

In connection with National YMCA Week, mentioned previously, General Secretary Dan Walton, of the Warren Association, has compiled the following from the annual report, which makes interesting reading at this particular time:
The last week of January has been designated by the National Council of the YMCA in the United States as "YMCA Week," and while newspapers and radios are telling the values of the YM services to the youth of our country, local staffs are correlating statistics for their annual reports. That our own Warren YMCA really serves the community in an extensive way is indicated by the report of last year's activities as follows: 117 groups, i.e. clubs, classes, teams, etc., had 4037 persons on their rosters during the past year. These 117 groups held 2034 sessions with a total attendance of 90,686, a tremendous volume of activity in one building in one year. In addition to the above, however, 39 special events were held with an attendance of 4476 persons, while 33 community groups held 141 meetings in the YMCA building with an attendance of 5315. While the gym and the swimming pool are always busy parts of the "YM," much credit for the continuance of this large volume of services goes to the volunteers and part-time helpers in the Boys Division since the "Y" staff has been working short-handed a good part of last year due to "Uncle Sam's" need of our Boys' work secretaries in the armed forces of our country. Next week another temporary Boys' work secretary will arrive to take over the work of that department for the balance of the winter and next summer seasons. Another item of note in last year's report is the resurgence of interest in the religious work of the Association with its weekly Prayer Meetings for Men, sponsored jointly by the CBMC and the "Y," and many other Christian emphasis programs.

learn that Yates Catlin, director of public relations, The American Waterways Operators, Inc., Washington, D. C., has been named general chairman for the eighth annual convention of the American Public Relations Association, according to announcement by Stephen James, president of the National Association of the Public Relations Profession. The convention will be held in the Mayflower Hotel in the capital March 2 and 3. Catlin, as we have reminded before, was executive secretary of the Upper Allegheny River Improvement Association, editor for the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and did information work for two war agencies during World War II. He is national treasurer of The American Public Relations Association and vice president of the National Capital Forge of that group.

Agriculture Head Lets No Grass Grow Under His Feet

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—New Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson is being widely acclaimed here for being the first member of the Eisenhower administration to pitch hay. His reorganization plan for the big Department of Agriculture was announced on his first day in office.

The most significant point about Secretary Benson's plan to put 20 agencies in the Department of Agriculture into four main administrative groups is that it is the first step of a much broader reorganization to come later.

What Secretary Benson has done so far doesn't cut a single employee off the federal payroll and doesn't save a single dollar. In fact, it may cost the government a little more. For three of the four new top administrators have been given responsibilities that should entitle them to rank and pay as assistant secretaries at $15,000 a year. Actually they have gone to work as administrative assistants at $10,800 a year.

They are John H. Davis, new head of the commodity marketing group of agencies; Romeo E. Short, head of the credit agencies, and Richard D. Aplin, head of the administrative agencies.

ON two occasions during the Truman administration Congress refused to approve adding more assistant secretaries to the Agriculture Department payroll.

Involved in the further reorganization plans for Department of Agriculture are other ticklish problems for Congress. Most important of all is an idea for complete merger of all soil conservation activities under John H. Davis.

There have been two conservation programs. Soil Conservation Service—SCS—took care of terracing, building ponds and prevention of erosion by permanent works. The Agricultural Conservation Program—ACP—made direct payments to farmers for liming and fertilizing their soil.

This year ACP payments are costing $250 million. During the war they got up to $600 million. American Farm Bureau and other organizations tried to cut these payments to $100 million last year but Congress refused to go along. In the offing is a plan to eliminate ACP payments altogether.

Along with this shift in emphasis on conservation work there are plans for decentralization of authority over conservation planning. They would take direction away from Washington and give it to the states.

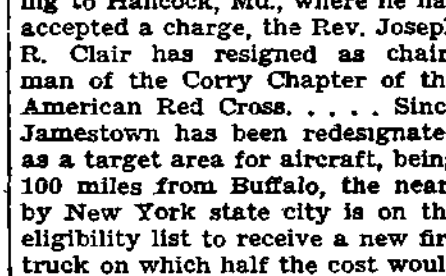

STILL other plans under consideration involve a change in organization of the Department of Agriculture's county committee structure. There are now 9000 of these committees—three for each of the farm counties.

Up to now they have been under direction of state committees appointed by Department of Agriculture. The new idea is to have the county committees elect the state committees.

All these reforms in Department of Agriculture were too much to present in one package. This is why Secretary Benson's new reorganization plan took only the first step in regrouping 20 agencies.

The inside story of the complete reorganization plan is that it has been put together by Temple University experts assigned to continue the Hoover Commission work. The Temple report on Department of Agriculture was turned over to Secretary Benson. He in turn took it up with President Eisenhower's new 14-man Agriculture Advisory Committee, under Dean William I. Myers of Cornell.

The job of revamping the Temple report was given to John H. Davis of Boston, formerly executive vice president of the American Wool Marketing Corp.

Warren Players Club Studio Night Provides Varied Entertainment Types

Deviating from its usual procedure of presenting dramatic productions for the public's entertainment, Warren Players Club turned last night to a program of experimental nature, designated Studio Night and labeled "for members only."

Prefacing the show, President Henry Walker appealed to the audience for more active participation and stressed the need for additional active and associate memberships.

Opening the bill, Director Helen Potter presented Al and LaMar Blyler and Glen Nelson in an amusing "Earthworm Tractor" tale from the pen of William Hazlett Upson, wherein "The Master Salesman" met his match in a man whose mind was made up and a loaded shotgun was the surprise item that turned the trick.

On the dramatic side, Eugene O'Neill's one-act story of tragedy aboard a whaling vessel in the Arctic waters was very ably handled by George Cunningham, Ed Erickson, Andy Yurick, Lois Erickson, Dick Blair, Sam Hagger, Byham, Dick Blair, Tony Lucia and A. J. McDonnell, appearing under the direction of Meredith Jones.

Turning to the fanciful side of the theatre, "The Devil Comes to Alcazar" was an entertaining bit of nonsense laid in the public square of a Spanish town and featured the following cast coached by Maritza Morgan: Quinn Smith, Helena Iseman, Nancy King, Margaret Wright, Dorothy Gancotti, Marcia Stevens, Robert Wilder, Kendall Morrison, Joseph Guiffre, and Norman Morgan.

Details of all three plays were worked out as carefully as is done for public shows, with much attention given to hand and stage props, costuming, make-up, lighting and stage arrangements. In fact, staging of the three productions might be termed the outstanding feat of the evening, since the crews were obliged to place all three sets, entirely different in character, one within another in order to facilitate removal and cut time lapses to a minimum.

SALON MEETING IN YOUNGVILLE HOME

Concluding the evening, refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by the following Youngville members: Mrs. Lena Mourer, Mrs. Teresa Bauer, Mrs. Mary Johnson, Mrs. Helen Tellman and Mrs. Alice Streeter.

The next meeting is scheduled for February 18, to be held at the home of Mrs. C. D. Cannon, Warren, preceded by a tureen dinner.

Television - - Pro and Con

By DAVID TAYLOR MARKE
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Since television became a major source of home entertainment, everyone connected with children—from the average parent to the multiple-degreed expert—has had a good deal to say about its effects on growing youngsters.

According to Professor Emma Sheehy of Columbia University's Teachers College, it is not the medium but the type of program itself that affects the youngster. Intelligent programming and intelligent selection, she says, can utilize a potent medium to produce a sound, healthy and highly beneficial effect on today's children. Says she:

"Many parents and educators have figuratively thrown up their hands in horror over the fact that our children are becoming a nation of spectators. Parents are bemoaning the fact that their children are not only spending their leisure, but the time when they should be studying, engrossed in fantastic or lurid video stories interspersed with commercials."

Actually, to consider TV's effect on youngsters as merely a time-consuming monster is to miss half the story, Dr. Sheehy believes. Children in their formative years learn more rapidly and more thoroughly, than at any other time. Much of this learning process is initially imitative—they notice motions or ideas they admire or enjoy—develop them—personalize them—and absorb these patterns into their behavior. Thus, she says, TV provides material for the active imagination to work on. While the child watches, he learns—and with a more enjoyable effect than if the same material were presented through study or home work.

As far as TV being a substitute for active play—another horror according to many people concerned with today's television toddlers—the same principle applies, according to Dr. Sheehy. Says she: "The child in his play draws on his experiences—and TV not only provides this basis of experience but can offer him actual tools to use in his play."

Just what type of program would fit the needs of the child? Dr. Sheehy points to those in which children actually participate and in which children at home can do likewise. Toys represent a significant tool in the development and education of children, especially those which encourage imaginative and cooperative play, says she.

A Philadelphia station will soon start televising a series of programs sponsored by Playskool, the manufacturers of construction sets, she points out. Children will be shown building log cabins and forts of the colonial period.

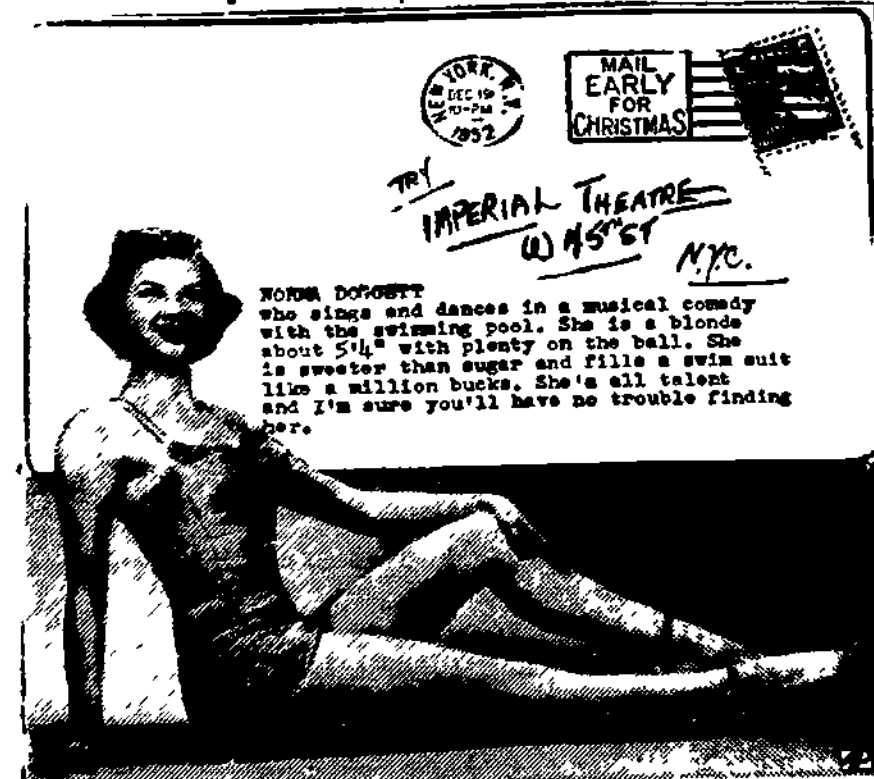

The primary advantage of such a program, Dr. Sheehy maintains, is that it does not present a pattern which must be studiously copied by the viewers. Instead, it shows youngsters how to work with materials and encourages them to be as creative as they choose in using these materials.

An added advantage of such a program, Dr. Sheehy concludes, is that children will become more conscious of pioneer building methods and lead them toward further exploration, through their innate curiosity, regarding early America. Thus, a natural tie-in with classroom history lessons may result.

Tribesman Deflates African Stories

AP Newsfeatures

New Haven—A Negro religious student is helping pay his way through Yale University School by dispelling some ideas Tarzan has created in the minds of American millions about his native Africa.

Amugbe Shodekeh admits in talks before church and social groups that his country's name, Sierra Leone, means "Mountain of Lions." But, he is quick to add, he saw his first lion in Scotland, safe behind the bars of a zoo. Actually, the little British Colony "looks something like your West Virginia," he says.

Sierra Leone, however, isn't as developed as West Virginia. That's why Amugbe, or Dave as he prefers to call himself, is taking his Ph.D. in religious education.

As a former Evangelical Church minister, he felt the need for further education of his people to aid their country's growth. He also plans to work for the unification of Christian churches in a country where only half of the people have been Christianized.

The large number of denominations, he feels, has tended to disrupt important tribal bonds and thus retard his country's growth.

Dave is a member of the Mendes Tribe. It has nearly a million members, more than a third of Sierra Leone's population. With two other large tribes, it accounts for the majority of the population.

He believes America can learn something from these tribes about how to live in peace. They have been living that way for about 35 years. That was the last time the country had an intra-tribal skirmish. From its conclusion, Dave got his own name which means, "Let There Be Peace."

His tribe is defined by Dave as a giant family with hundreds of years of experience in living together. It sounds confusing but in his native village he can call most of the 6,000 or 7,000 inhabitants uncle, aunt or cousin.

The tribes do have ceremonies featured by dancing, music and feasting. But they hardly ever reach the stage of wild exuberance encountered by Tarzan. They are good hunters too. Their equipment consists largely of a "bush" sense, clothing dyed to eliminate human scent, and in Dave's case, a rifle. Spears are rare.

The Mendes are unhampered by western restrictions on clothing. They dress comfortably to suit the climate which is hot but not unbearable. Trade winds cool this little country on the west coast of Africa just above where the continent curves eastward to create the Gulf Guinea.

Largest mammal native to the Philippines is the timarau, related to the water buffalo.

AMUGBE SHODEKEH wears costume of African Tribesman.

The Mendes don't place the value on money which Western civilization do. Until a hundred years ago, in fact, they had no currency.

Mining and agriculture are the basis of his country's economy. Diamonds, gold, iron and chromium are its principal mineral resources. Rice, ginger, palm nuts and palm oil are its main agricultural resources.

The cattle industry is growing with the elimination of the tsetse fly, carrier of sleeping sickness.

Dave had another shock for Tarzan devotees. The biggest jungle in his country "is about the size of some of your large forests."

To fully realize the vast potential of the "Dark Continent," education is essential. Dave is one of 1,500 African students in this country preparing themselves for this task.

Africa needs America's help, Dave feels. But it can't be in the old way of imperialism by which much of Africa was colonized by other countries.

Dave said that when an African dreams of the devil, it's always a white devil. Thus, when at the age of 12 he saw his first white man, it fitted Dave's picture of the devil.

At first, Dave said, he thought the man was covered with chalk. He even scratched him to see if the color would come off. Instead, Dave drew blood.

The man, a missionary, introduced Dave to school.

And that is what ultimately brought Dave to Yale.

In Columbus

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Blair, Columbus, Ind., are parents of a daughter, weighing nine and one-half pounds and given the name Stacey Ann, who was born on January 22. Mrs. Blair is the former Anne C. Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert E. Peterson, Sheffield.

C'mon, Joe—there goes the siren!

When fires break out, Pennsylvania's volunteer fire companies do a marvelous job of alerting their members. In many cases, by siren signals, they even broadcast the location of the fire so that firefighters can get there faster.

But—how does news of the fire reach the firehouse?

Most of the time it's by telephone . . . by the same dependable line of communication that's used millions of times a day for messages of all kinds, urgent and otherwise. Firefighters, like almost everyone else, take good dependable telephone service for granted. That's the way telephone men and women want it to be. And they're on the job, night and day, to keep it that way.

wants took their places at the table and listened to the invocation by Rev. Alfred Bauer, rector of St. Joseph's church. The opening ceremony, in true Boy Scout style, was given by Den Chief James Hewitt, and Sub Scouts Cortland Carlson, James Chittaster, Eugene Conklin, James Nordine, Jr., David Anderson, Richard Fowler and Paul Johnson of Den 3, Pack 2, sponsored by the Johnson PTA and of which Mrs. Robert Chittaster is a member.

Byron W. Knapp, Council president, acted as toastmaster and thanked the Board of School Directors for use of Beaky gym, the recognition dinner having outgrown the halls in the central part of Warren. He introduced the many guests at the speaker's table as well as 23 members of the 4-member Executive Council who were present, and two former Council presidents, Supt. Carl Whipple and F. M. Caughy. A telegram from that veteran Scout, Harold Banghart, National Council representative, was read. Mr. Banghart, writing from a hospital in Cleveland, expressed his regret for his absence, extended best wishes, and the Council wired him in return.

"This occasion is reserved for those on the firing line," said Mr. Knapp, "for those who are putting across the Scout program. This is the one time of year when we can call all of you for a job well done. This dinner meeting is held to say 'Thank you!' to those on the firing line and to assure them of our help."

"This Council lives or dies as the individual unit functions," Mr. Knapp continued. "Our percentage of coverage of the boy crop is good but we are not satisfied." He told how the troops are formed and sponsored and again declared that "The entire organization must function as a unit or the Council is wiped out."

Mr. Knapp complimented Mrs. Richard Bloss, Sr., of Sheffield, for her work and said her primary interest in Scouting is not the fact that her son, Dick, became an Eagle this year but in her endeavors as a den mother in Sheffield.

Commissioner William Wehner, in calling the roll for the 50 units in Warren county, discovered large representations from several, especially the units from Sheffield, while the other outlying districts were scantily represented because of the bad roads. It might be said that some Warren streets must have been in worse condition than was generally known because a number of troops right here in Warren had no one present at the dinner. Post 5 of the Elks, Troop 2 of Grace Methodist church, and Troop 6 of St. Joseph's church, were others which had a large representation.

The coming Scout Jamboree in California was mentioned by Mr. Knapp, saying that Don Laufferberger will be on the sectional staff, Earl Mohnkern is to be Scoutmaster of the Jamboree troop with Lester McArthur and Don Lauffer as assistant scoutmasters.

Mr. Knapp then introduced William E. Yeager, chairman of the Silver Beaver committee, who took his place in front of the Silver Beaver rostrum with R. L. Enders, also on the committee, and called other Silver Beavers to join them: F. M. Caughy, Byron Knapp, C. H. Gardner, Carl Barwis, Neil D. Patterson, Don Lauffer, Carl Rogers, H. L. Blair and C. Ray Lewis. Mr. Banghart, who is ill, also was a member of the committee. Mr. Jones was escorted forward by Don Lauffer and presented the high award. He responded with but a few words and drew applause when he said "Let's get back to work!"

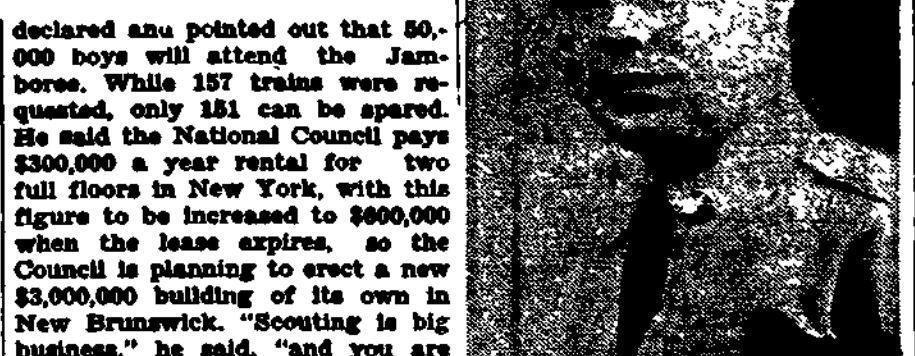

Mr. Jones' first work in Warren County Council dates back 22 years to 1931 when he became an assistant scoutmaster at Ludlow. Subsequently he became scoutmaster there and served actively until he moved to Warren in 1941 when he became a neighborhood commissioner here, serving ever since. A member of Salem EUB church, Mr. Jones teaches a Sunday School class there, is past su-

Investigation Fails To Determine How Patient Was Injured

A coroner's jury investigating the death of Mrs. Tena Bailey, 61, which occurred about 4:20 o'clock Friday morning at the Warren State Hospital, North Warren, after listening to testimony from a number of witnesses, including attendants, nurses, physicians and investigating officers including Sheriff L. E. Linder and Pvt. Joseph Mastrian, of the State Police, yesterday afternoon reached the following verdict:

"That Mrs. Tena Bailey, a patient, came to her death at the Warren State Hospital, North Warren, Pennsylvania, January 29, 1953, from an intra-cranial hemorrhage resulting from an injury sustained January 14, 1953, when her right eye was torn from the socket."

It was divulged that the patient received the injury in some un-revealed manner around ten o'clock January 14, while in a dormitory off a second floor ward in the Mitchell Building. At the time Mrs. Bailey was confined in the dormitory with six other patients, segregated under hospital regulations that were explained to the jury.

Two attendants, Mrs. Vera Lower and Mrs. Helen King testified they were in the ward when they were attracted by some person at the dormitory door trying to attract attention. Investigating they found Mrs. Bailey on her cot, with her right eye lacerated and blood on bed clothing and her hands. Both declared the type of other patients in the dormitory at the time made it impossible to ascertain just what happened. Not any of them, however, showed evidence of having been in an altercation of any kind. The evidence of the attendants was substantiated by Miss Joanne Constable, RN, the nurse in charge at the time, Dr. Lloyd A. Grumbles, physician in charge of the ward and building, and Dr. John Urbaitis, assistant superintendent who joined

IN MEMORY

In loving memory of Arlie F. Smith who departed this life one year ago Feb. 1, 1952.

There is an open gate at the end of the road
Through which each must go alone,
And there is a light we cannot see
Our Father claims His own.
Beyond that gate our loved one
Finds happiness and rest.
And there is a comfort in the thought
A loving God knows best.
Sadly missed, and lovingly remembered by his wife, children and mother.

Protests Over Change In Fish Warden Area Fade as Plan Starts

Kane Republican: Roars of protest over a Pennsylvania Fish Commission action in abolishing the old policy of assigning fish wardens to a particular county, have faded out as the new program becomes effective February 1. The plan was thoroughly discussed at a recent meeting of the North Central Division of the Federation of Sportsmen's clubs here with protests reviewed and the organization finally approving the state action.

The Commission long has studied the program and all wardens, including Wilbur Williams, of Collegeville, have been informed of the new set-up which eliminates county boundaries insofar as stream patrols and jurisdiction of wardens is concerned.

Replacing the antiquated and expensive county areas, the board has established watershed or streams districts which may include an entire county or parts of bordering counties. The new program, becoming effective on Sunday, is expected to eliminate many miles of travel by a warden—who under the old system was required to drive across his county—and in some instances, two counties for the purpose of stream patrol. Under the new plan, the work will be performed by the warden living closest to the stream.

In addition to travel economy, the state fish wardens will be better able to render valuable assistance to the Commission's stream management program, provide better protection and more efficient field service. The Commission has explained that the revamping of its field enforcement division is but one step in a plan for improving and expanding fishing in the commonwealth.

Corry Journal: A 1951 sedan driven by Gerald Black was smashed about the front end but Black who had jumped from the auto escaped injury when the car was struck by a Pennsylvania Railroad freight train on the Eagle street crossing at 6:25 Wednesday night. C. E. Schoenfeld, sergeant of the railroad police who investigated said Black, whose home is at 75 East Columbus avenue, was driving eastward on Eagle street when his car stalled on the crossing. Seeing the train approaching Black leaped from the auto just before it was hit by the locomotive which was traveling southward. The impact smashed the front end of the sedan, causing a loss estimated at $250. Sgt. Schoenfeld said the train was in charge of Conductor James Rich while the engineer was Robert Carr.

Bible Words to Live by
JOHN 3:16—"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."
I hesitate to suggest my favorite Bible verse. It is a bit as if some one asked me to name my favorite son or daughter. There are four of them and each has an equal place in my affections. Bible verses are a bit like that to me.
Perhaps John 3:16 stands at the top of the list. No other verse seems to embody so much of the evangel. This verse, sometimes called, "The Gospel in a Nutshell" certainly is at the heart of the gospel message. God's infinite love His supreme gift to man, His inclusive invitation to eternal life, and His promise of our redemption through Christ, are the basic foundations on which our salvation rests.
It is for these and other reasons that I cherish John 3:16, as containing a gold nugget of spiritual truth of par excellence value.

Poor, Yet Making Many Rich
BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
"POOR, yet making many rich" that is how Saint Paul describes the condition and privilege of the early Christian believers, many of whom were evidently quite poor in worldly goods. "As having nothing," he adds, "and yet possessing all things" (II Corinthians 6:10).
It was not a chance remark or a sentimental idea on the Apostle's part, but an expression of his settled philosophy concerning the Christian's possessions. He wrote (Ephesians 3:8) of "the unsearchable riches of Christ" as the content of his preaching. But also, in the First Epistle to the Corinthians (Chapter 3:21-23), he reasoned more directly concerning the Christian's wealth.
The Christian belongs to Christ. Christ is God's. All things belong to God. Therefore, he writes to the Corinthians, "All things are yours."
There is a secular parallel in the famous saying of the pagan philosopher, poor, but with a vision: "Cleon hath a thousand acres, but the landscape is I."
The cynic may protest that this sort of wealth will not pay the rent, taxes or doctor's bills, or even the expense of keeping soul and body together. There is a point in the criticism but it might also be pointed out that Paul was no visionary dreamer regarding the practical affairs of life and what we call "making a living."
He worked at his trade as tent-maker to support himself and he

Problem of "Bad" Checks Received By State on Increase

The problem of "bad" checks sent to the State Revenue Department in payment of license fees for motor vehicles has reached greater proportions than ever before, it was revealed today.

With the deadline for renewal of Drivers' Licenses just passing and the rush period of 1953 Registration Tags approaching, Otto F. Messmer, Revenue Secretary, issued a warning to Pennsylvania's applicants.

"In all cases where the sender's check fails to clear the bank for any reason whatever," he pointed out, "the Commonwealth is compelled to assess a penalty of $5. No exceptions can be made, regardless of the circumstances. The law is mandatory."

Messmer cited Section 718 of the Motor Vehicle Code dealing with uncollectible checks. It says, in part:

"Whenever any check . . . shall be returned to the department as uncollectible, the Secretary shall charge a fee of five ($5) dollars . . . to the person presenting such check."

Most instances where these checks have "bounced," the Secretary said, resulted from the sender closing his account at the bank before the check had gone through.

"If an applicant will just make certain that such checks have cleared his bank before he closes out the account, he can save himself money and inconvenience."

"How Trucks Help Railroads" Subject of Magazine Article

Dove-tailing rail and highway transportation to develop the best service from each is the objective of Pennsylvania Railroad policy, according to R. J. Littlefield, general tax agent for the railroad.

A signed article by him in the February issue of "The Penny" magazine, published by the P. R. R. employees, titled "How Trucks Help Railroads," states that 95% of America's trucks aid and improve railroad transportation "by making it easier for most people to ship most things by rail" and that "only 5% of all trucks can possibly be considered as railroad competitors."

The position of the railroads generally and the Pennsylvania particularly with relation to the trucking industry is reviewed in the article which was written prior to the lawsuit against 31 railroads and 35 individuals filed January 17 by representatives of the trucking industry in U. S. District Court in Philadelphia.

"The railroads seek no unfair advantage and they wish to impose no burden of prejudiced restrictions on trucks," the article states.

"Let the operator of each form of transportation pay the full cost of his operation, charge the least he can, give the best service he can—and then let each customer choose the railroad, the trucking company, the airline, the barge, or whatever other form of transportation best suits him," the article declares.

Pennsylvania Leads In Three National Religious Programs

Harrisburg — Pennsylvania led all the states in three national observances of religious significance during 1952.

Four hundred official delegates from 20 cooperating Christian communities to the 42nd annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches, February 3-4, in Williamsport, will hear that Pennsylvania was first with more than 300 communities and members of 7,000 churches cooperating in the Revised Standard Version of the Bible Observances.

Indicating growing cooperation in local communities across the state will be the reports to members of 70 judicatories, meeting in Pine Street Methodist Church, that Pennsylvania also ranked first in The Call to United Christian Youth and World Day of Prayer.

The five departments directing the cooperative work of the participating denominations—Evangelism and Spiritual Life, Inter-Church Relations, Social Relations, Town and Country Churches and Women's Work—will meet Tuesday afternoon, February 3, Dr. Dwight F. Putnam, Harrisburg, president of the Council, announced.

Dr. Jesse M. Bader, New York, executive secretary of the Joint Department of Evangelism, National Council of the Churches of Christ in USA, will speak Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in the host church. The Rev. A. Russell Stevenson, New York, director of the 1953 Program Emphasis for the National Council, will address delegates at the Wednesday luncheon.

The official business of the Council will be conducted at the Wednesday session which begins at 9:30 a. m. in the Pine Street Methodist Church.

Winter Weather Is Unique in This State

Harrisburg — The State Planning Board, Department of Commerce, today said nothing better illustrates Pennsylvania's unique position among the Eastern states than the variety of its winter weather.

The northern sector of the State approximates the latitude of southern New England, and the south experiences the notably milder climate of Maryland. The average annual snowfall, the State Planning Board points out, is only 30 inches in the southeastern portion of the Commonwealth, and is twice as much along our northern border.

The average number of days when snow covers the ground varies from a minimum of 40 in the eastern third of the State and the southwestern corner, to as much as 120, or practically one-third of the year, in northern counties where winter sports are becoming an important business. The average January temperature along the southern border is ten degrees higher than along the line where Pennsylvania touches New York.

A matter which affects the length of time during which the land can be cultivated is the depth to which frost penetrates into the soil. Except along the mountain ranges, the depth of frozen earth in the heart of the winter averages from 10 to 15 inches in the southern third of the State, but reaches down 20 to 30 inches in the northern counties.

Atomic Energy for Industrial Plants Available Within Year

By SAM DAWSON

New York (AP)—Atomic energy, to run industrial power plants and light homes is possible within two years—one authority predicts—if Congress and the Defense Department would permit it.

A big utility company goes him one better and says it may be ready within one year to build an atomic power plant and feed its juice into existing electric lines in the Detroit area.

The Atomic Energy Commission itself says such plants may be financially feasible "in a few years."

And in England government officials report they are so far along with plans to build an atomic power plant for industry that they are looking for a site for it.

Setting his sights on the distant future, an official of an American industrial concern foresees that some day the world's power requirements may be met entirely with atomic energy. In that distant day—in the opinion of Dr. George Curme Jr., vice president of the Union Carbide and Carbon Corp.—coal and petroleum would be used chiefly as chemical sources of industrial products.

Detroit Edison Co., which is teamed with Dow Chemical in studying the problem of atomic power, predicts it might be ready to build such a plant within a year. Heat from the plant would produce steam to run a conventional turbine. Existing Detroit power lines would be used. And Detroit Edison thinks the electricity could be produced at a competitive cost.

If Congress would approve such a plant, one could be built within two or three years for around 35 million dollars to supply electricity for a city of 100,000—this on the word of Sen. Henry M. Jackson (D-Wash.) who formerly served on the House Atomic Energy Committee. He told delegates of the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association meeting in San Francisco that they ought to look into the idea.

The Atomic Energy Commission, a little more cautiously, puts the time limit at "a few years." It thinks costs of such a plant could be made competitive if the large reactors, now being perfected would furnish both power and "weapon-grade" plutonium. . . . bought by AEC. In other words, a tie-in with the A-bomb would be necessary to offset costs of producing electricity.

Dishcloths and dish mops not only become unsightly very quickly, they can also serve as carriers for harmful germs. A regular Clorox bath will make them fresh-smelling and sanitary, too.

PROMISE OF DELIGHT

By Mary Howard

Chapter 37

IN the morning Anthea went in to Mario with his coffee, Joe's letter, and a plea for Bianca. Mario was furious, he did not want to relent and at first refused to see her. But living alone among the white fur and gold walls, and eating Mrs. Grainger's cooking was beginning to tell. He secretly wanted Bianca back. She had looked after him for twenty years, and he was unhappy as a cat when his habitual background was disturbed. He relented, but very sternly, and Bianca with many tears, and exclamations of gratitude and promises of eternal servitude, was admitted into his presence. She could come back, said Mario, but any more nonsense, and it would be the end. And whatever happened to Gina, she was not living there any more.

Bianca crept into the kitchen, and when she heard the door open, she came out to drive Mario down to the studio, she was busy about the house again, and the house was beginning to smell and look like the Carliotti's home. She dusted and polished, and filled the vases with flowers, and set out the table of drinks, and put some tomato sauce on to simmer. The smell of garlic gently permeated into the hall, and with it Bianca's spirits began to rise.

At the studio Mario found he had forgotten his portfolio.

"That woman!" he said. "Why has a man to have women about him?"

"Do you think . . ." Anthea began, and he heard her say, and Mario roared in interruption.

"Of course he will come back. Stupid carissima! Don't be so in love, Anthea, it spoils your work! When you were so unhappy you would not have forgotten my portfolio. Go back and get it, and hurry, there's a sweet one."

"Okay," said Anthea. She turned the car back homewards, her thoughts miles away, automatically following the way home, stopping at traffic lights, changing gear, giving signals. The bright sunny day was beginning to overcast with a threatening hint of rain.

Why did not Joe come? Over the common, past the station down the Avenue. With a catch of her breath, and a feeling that her heart would explode, she recognized a long, loose-limbed, flying figure, head down against the rain, streaking for cover. She accelerated and passed him, drew into the curb, and as he drew level pushed the door of the Buick open.

"Want a lift, neighbor?"

JOE skidded to a standstill, unconsciously pushed her out of the driver's seat, scrambled in all wet from the rain, took her in his arms and kissed her until she went limp.

"What have you been thinking about me?" he said, raising his head.

Everything you can imagine and more," she murmured. "But Bianca came back and told me everything. In the end Mario meant more to her than Gina."

"Darling Anthea, darling Anthea . . . will you please marry me, please, before anything else happens?"

"I would like that in writing," said Anthea, and then he was kissing her again.

"Right away, as soon as we can get a license?"

"Yes, yes," she said protestingly, and for a moment they sat, looking at each other, and then she said helplessly, happily, "I suppose I have to get used to these upsets if I marry Carliotti. They seem to be quite irresistible to women."

"So long as you don't resist, that's all that matters. I was only waiting until I had Mario settled," explained Joe. "But I can't take another risk like that."

Say . . . he began to search about him. "Where's that newspaper I had over my head? Here . . ." He found the damp paper on the floor, and spread it on the steering wheel before her. "Take a look at this."

"Young Film Star Weds in Paris. Carliotti's Sprig of Spring Finds Romance with Industrialist's Son." There was a picture of Gina, looking quite lovely in one of the dresses that Anthea had chosen, her arms full of flowers, gazing with apparent adoration into the face of the good-looking young Pierre Dulac.

"Well, well," said Joe commiseratingly, "the poor guy!"

"But the picture," said Anthea frantically. "Joe . . . do you think she'll be back by Monday next?"

"Oh, I'm sure. It says something about it here. His finger ran down the newspaper. "Miss Scarpi's honeymoon will be spent filming. She is due in England on Monday to resume work on the Carliotti picture 'Pierette'. She's married a Frenchman, they're right about money. He'll bring her back on Monday." He paused. "Where were you going?"

"Back to your place to get Mario's portfolio."

"Okay, we'll go and get it, and take it to him, and then we'll go and have lunch, and then go out about a license. Know where your birth certificate is?"

"Yes."

He drove along to her home, and Marian, flapping a duster out of the window, waved them a delightful and astonished greeting.

"We'll go in and get that certificate, and tell her," said Joe.

"Joe, supposing Gina doesn't come on Monday?"

Joe put his arm tightly round her, and kissed her again. "In that case, my very own darling, Mario will have to go and get her himself. You and I, my love, have other things to do."

Chapter One

DURANGO died at noon. He didn't say a word. Didn't even grunt. He just lay down and died.

Jim Rimbaud crouched holding a bloody bandage he had been adjusting for Durango. Fatigue slouched Rimbaud's lean-shanked body; it marked his angular face and was a dullness in his eyes. Beyond him, propped on trembling legs, stood two tired horses.

Rimbaud peered down at Durango's slack-jawed face and remembered how this dead man had dreamed of becoming presidente of all Mexico. But he'd had one weakness. Women. And one had betrayed him for a pouch of federal gold.

He faced southward, observing a long smear of risen dust above the barren plain. That would be the federal cavalry coming to do the job it had failed to accomplish last night at San Sebastian.

It was characteristic of Jim Rimbaud that he didn't glance at Durango again. The smoky years had given him a gambler's fatalism. Durango was dead. Finished. And so was his fabulous dream of driving Porfirio Diaz from the palace national. There had been some chance of winning the revolution while Durango lived, but now there was no chance at all.

Calculating the distance between this dry river bed and the oncoming riders, Rimbaud decided that it was not more than three miles. A matter of minutes. A man couldn't make a stand here. Nor anywhere this side of the border hills. Rimbaud plodded over to the horses and gave the down-headed animals a squint-eyed appraisal. There seemed little choice between them, for they were both close to being foundered.

"Wore out," Rimbaud muttered. "Like me."

Moving without hurry, Rimbaud untied Durango's saddlebags and transferred them to his rattled roan gelding. The cavalry, he supposed, had obtained fresh horses from some friendly hacienda this morning. There would be no chance of the roans outrunning them to the border hills, which were upwards of fifteen miles away. Yet, because he possessed a thorough knowledge of his pursuers, Rimbaud retained a cynical confidence. The power of gringo gold was great in Mexico. It might buy him the time he needs to reach those hills.

So thinking, Rimbaud rode north, prodding the reluctant roan to a slow trot. Presently he opened the flap of a saddlebag and brought out a handful of gold pieces—American double eagles, which in Mexico were worth five times their face value. He dropped one to the ground, and seeing how brightly it shone in the sunlight, understood the temptation it would be to poorly paid soldados. He tossed a gold piece to the left of the roan's tracks and another to the right, then, flipped two more farther out on each side.

Oro de Libertad. Durango had called it; gold for the liberation. A small fortune, it. Jim Rimbaud smiled thinly, hoping that the double eagles would last long enough to liberate a gringo driver whose sole ambition was to reach Arizona Territory alive.

Rimbaud looked back, curious to know how close the cavalry was. The group had pulled to. One man was already on the ground. Now another dismounted, and another. They were all quitting their saddles.

Jim Rimbaud loosed a gusty sigh. "Oro de Libertad," he breathed.

For a time then, while he kept the roan to a shuffling jog, Rimbaud watched his backtrail. The cavalry was farther off each time he looked, the lead riders stopping to pick up gold pieces while rear ones raced on to the next nest of glittering double eagles.

"Like hogs hunting acorns," Rimbaud mused derisively, and flung another handful, spreading the gold of liberation wide, as a man sowing seed on fertile ground.

Rimbaud tilted the brim of his dust-peppered hat low over his aching eyes. He contemplated the border hills, estimating the miles at nine or ten. There was a spring due north on the southern slope; Smuggle's Well, they called it. And the town of Junction lay a few miles beyond the divide in Quadrille Basin. He had once spent a month in Junction, recovering from a bullet-slashed tendon in his left leg. Thinking back to that occasion, Rimbaud tallied the date and was surprised that it had been scarcely two years ago. He had done a lot of drifting since then.

"Too much," he muttered, and saw himself for what he was: a cynical drifter disillusioned by lost causes. At twenty-eight his chief possessions were a Buick model T roadster and a worn-out horse. That, plus a puckered scar where a bullet had gouged his right thigh, and another scar on his thigh, was what had got him free—once fighting had got him.

Scuffy, in the way of a man making a solemn vow, Rimbaud said, "I've had enough, by God. More than plenty."

The saddlebags were almost empty now. But the border hills were much closer. They lay huddled in the shimmering heat haze like dusty elephants asleep in the sunlight. The Arizona-Sonora line ran across the base of them, which was as far as the Mexican cavalry would come. If the roan remained on his feet for another hour, he would be stirring the dust of American soil.

Wills Defeats Business School to Win First Half Honors

Capacity Crowd Sees Seven Point Victory by Cleaners; Losers Rally in Second Half

The YMCA-City Basketball League first half championship was decided last night, when Wills Cleaners defeated the Warren Business School by a score of 56 to 49 in a ragged jolting contest on the "Y" court.

A capacity crowd watched the underdog Schoolboys suffer a 29-17 deficit at intermission and then return to the game with a startling 22-point rally in the third period to lose the gap to 40-39. The game remained a hot see-saw contest until the last minute of the final stanza.

Playing his best ball the first half, Bob Reese led Wills' attack with 20 points and was outstanding in his rebound work on the boards.

Mid-way through the first quarter Wills held only a 9-7 dvantage, but little Carmen Colosimo finished off the period with five points to set the champs up a 14-8 lead. The second period went the same way and soon the Schoolboys found themselves lost on the short-end of a 29-17 score.

By the time half of the third game had gone by, the Schoolboys had shaved the lead to 37-25. Then suddenly the bottom fell out of Wills and within 30 seconds Ray itche, Hud Berdine and Bob Wolfe poured in a series of three buckets and the latter a free throw to make a new game, 37-35.

At this point the Wills aggression was losing the boards to the Schoolboys and were being treas with their long passes.

Towering Bob Simpson tipped in two pointer and followed with free throw to make it 40-35, but Wolfe dumped a one-banger and with three seconds big Jim Peterson dropped in a similar shot to tie the period, 40-39.

In the first five minutes of the me stretch the lead exchanged five times and the score as deadlocked thnce before Wills led ahead in the closing moments. But Berdine knotted the unt the last time, 48-48, Simpson and Tom Juliano dropped in dirty tosses and Reese put up a al for a 52-48 advantage. Wolfe id Ricky Scalise exchanged fouls id at the 30-second point Reese led another. Leading by five ints, Juliano drove in for a lay-

Through The Wind Tunnel

Hal Boyle will be as much surprised as you are to find himself in today's Wind Tunnel, providing all the wind. Taking up as the Poor Man's Philosopher, here's what he has to say, starting off with a letter from a little girl, say on the East Side:

"Dear Sir,

"I am just a litul girl ate yeers old. I am despretly in luv with two boys in the third grade.

"Johnny is nice, he carries my books home from school, helps me make mud pies, and lets me play with his lektric trane. He even saves pennsy in his piggy bank to buy me bubbel gum.

"Bill is a bad boy. He pulls my hare and pushes me. He takes my bubbel gum and chews ft all up himself. The teacher is made at him, and he is getting rededy to run away and be a hermut.

"Witch-wun shall I grow up and marry

"Signed Maybelle

P. S. How do you like my han-righting? I just lurned how."

Well, Maybelle, you are confronted with woman's oldest problem—now to choose between two fine men, one who wants to marry you, and the other who thinks he doesn't.

It is a big decision, and one you ought to think through. Don't rush into anything. Keep them both dangling for a while. After all, you still have to make up your mind finally.

As I see it, Maybelle, Johnny is perhaps the more dangerous choice. Little boy angels sometimes turn out to be real devilish in middle age.

It is nice to be married to a thoughtful, considerate husband. But isn't Johnny a bit on the dull side? If you married him he would always be underfoot, and it might be rather like having a male maid around the house.

He even sounds too good to be true. And that may be the case, little Maybelle. At 40, Johnny may suddenly decide he wants somebody else, and start putting money in his piggy bank to buy some young blonde a mink coat. That'll mean the old heave-ho for you.

Bill offers more of a challenge. I would say—the rough-hewn kind of male any woman feels she could sculpture into something better.

A man who at the age of eight has the idea of becoming a hermit will probably later turn out to be a bank president—or a bank bandit. It all depends on whether the right woman gets a hold of him.

Once you housebreak a guy like Bill he stays house-broken—just like a well-broken horse. Don't worry. Ten years after you're married, he'll be carrying the Grocery packages, drying the dishes, and bringing you his paycheck intact.

In his heart Bill may secretly remain a hermit—but he'll be a hermit in your house. And he'll stick to you like a birthmark until his grave.

Anything else doing in the third grade, Maybelle?

Minneapolis Giant On Celoron Program

Celoron—Ivan Kameroff, a giant, newcomer from Minneapolis, will team with Butcher Boy Lee Henning in Monday's team grapples. Promoter Frank Scaglione said today. They will oppose the two glamor boys, Fred Blasie and Sandor Kovacs.

Jim Austen, an Italian newcomer, tangles with Jack Bence in the semi-windup.

The opener pairs Bibber McCoy and Frank Hurley.

Lucky Simunovich returned to the local ring last week and defeated Jim "The Bull" Wright in a three-fall thriller.

The top 2-year old pacer of 1952 was Hillsota who polled 51 votes. Isosla's Ensign was second with 28.

FOR A MODEST, quiet youngster who would prefer to have his slashing racket do his talking for him rather than his vocal cords, good-looking Frank Sedgman has gained more world-wide fame than most publicity-seeking movie stars.

Frank's activities are still burning up wires all over the world now that he is battling pro champion Jack Kramer for the world's title. Their spotlighted duel will be seen at Memorial Auditorium in Buffalo on Sunday, February 1st, starting at 2:15.

Second Half Action Helps Rocket Team Defeat Style Shop

Four Rockets combined their efforts to pace the way, Jim Stevenson leading with 15 points, followed by Roger Babcock, Fran Masterson and Nick Creola with 14, 12 and 11 respectively. Stan Warren hit the high mark for the Style Shop with 13 points.

Grove City's Veteran Wrestlers Trounce the Dragons by 39 to 11

Ron Necciai Best of Club's Rookie Crop

By MURRAY OLDERMAN
NEA Staff Correspondent
Pittsburgh, Pa. — (NEA) — The man they call the Mahatma leaned back in his swivel chair, tugged at his unit cigar, admitted the Pittsburgh Pirates were far behind their rebuilding schedule, and then handed down the words of salvation.

"It's our prospective pitching, young man," rumbled Branch Rickey, Sr., by title the executive vice-president and general manager of the Pittsburgh ball club—specifically, the boss.

Rickey, a spritely 70, his black hair barely flecked with gray at the edges, pointed his cigar to the far side of his office underneath the stands at Forbes Field. A blackboard with mounted white names covered the wall and the scope of the Pirate baseball enterprise.

"Mark down these names. Bob Kline, who was with us last year, Bill Bell up from Bristol, 18-year-old Brown. Let's see—what's his first name."

He thumbed through a roster atop his triangular desk.

"Oh, yes, Jack Brown, great prospect. Big Ed Wolfe, who was with us in Spring training last year, might do it. He has the equipment. By all means, mark down Arthur Murray and Cal Hogue and Lefty LaPalme.

"LaPalme," he repeated with a shrewd nod. "He has that other pitch he needs for stardom—the knuckler. It could mean more confidence and make him the big winner this year."

He shifted his gaze to the column marked national defense.

"The one who should be the best of all is Ron Necciai. He's our greatest young talent. There are factors, of course, in his case—NOT PETTIT MAN.

How about Bill Macdonald, the young Californian who won 8 and lost 10 in 1950, then went away to war? He's due to rejoin Pittsburgh this season.

"I don't know," intoned Rickey. "He has yet to solidify himself. You realize also he pre-dates me in Pittsburgh."

Rickey didn't mention the Pirates' $100,000 bonus boy, Paul Pettit, in his roundup.

"I'm not a Pettit man," he said abruptly. "Our new manager, Fred Haney, is."

Rickey, who brought to baseball a drove of innovations such as the farm system, believes there is still more room for pioneering.

"The most fertile field in baseball," he mused, "lies in hastening the development of young ball players. I don't mean these camps that now are being conducted. They're just exposures of sheep and cattle at the market place. What baseball needs is a capable faculty to give genuine instruction.

"We're proceeding along that line here. Certainly, other clubs have fine teachers, but there is no concerted drive in that field. We propose to wage a constructive program."

The telephone buzzed. Cincinnati's Gabe Paul on the wire. And on a constructive note, the Mahatma swung into the business of the day.

Rated as one of the finest squads in District 10, Grove City High rubbed the noses of Warren's Dragon grapplers in the mat last night for a 39 to 11, decision. The meet took place in Grove City.

With a full squad of 11 veterans, only four of whom are seniors, the Grove City matmen gave Coach Homer Barr's grunt and groaners a real working over and won five matches by falls and three by decisions in the 11-match event.

Lou Cummings, moving up to the 103-pound weight division, won his fifth straight match with the only first-period pin in the meet. He put W. McNulty to the canvas in 1:28. Warren's other five points were earned by Bob Smith, who slapped D. Koeing to the mat in 2:20 of the second period.

Probably the biggest individual heartbreak of the night was Glenn Cook's defeat to R. Richardson in the 135-pound class, where he had previously wrestled to four straight pins.

Although decided again, newcomer Chuck Eaton again put up one of the Barrmen's best scraps against a more experienced foe.

The most outstanding grappler for Grove City last night was R. Puntureri, who beat Den Brown.

Top Baseball Brass Now Juggling With Fred Saigh Future

New York (AP)—Fred Saigh's baseball future today was in the hands of two of the sport's top officials—Commissioner Ford Frick and National League President Warren Giles.

The owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, sentenced to 15 months in prison and fined $15,000 for income tax evasion, confers today with Frick and Giles regarding the sale of his Cardinal holdings.

A few hours before the crucial conference, Saigh said:

"I don't want to sell but I will not do anything that will embarrass baseball."

Even before Saigh arrived in New York, several undisclosed offers were made for his stock, which amounts to practically 100 per cent.

Bill Walsingham Jr., vice president of the Cardinals, said:

"I definitely would be interested in purchasing the club if and when Mr. Saigh decided to dispose of his holdings."

Walsingham is a nephew of the late Sam Breadon, from whom Saigh and the late Bob Hannegan bought the Cards.

Tread Lightly-Proud Foot!

That's a mighty proud foot you see there. It's resting on the accelerator of a gorgeous 1953 Cadillac.

But we have a serious and timely warning for that proud and happy foot: Tread lightly!

Down under that accelerator is a dynamic 210-horsepower engine—coupled with the smoothest, quickest-acting Hydra-Matic Drive in history.

That great power was put there for the driver's safety—and to provide that smooth, effortless, steady ride which is the essence of luxurious motoring.

It was not put there to enable a Cadillac to dominate the highway—or to dash into the lead when the traffic light turns green—or to out-maneuver the other cars on the road.

So don't ever exhaust that accelerator—unless you're in an emergency, and must do so for reasons of safety.

If other drivers covet the honors at the stop light—just let them go. They are first away by your courtesy—and that should be satisfaction enough for anybody.

Just be happy and satisfied with the great luxury this powerful engine brings you—the infinitely smooth performance... the quick "lift" that comes when you nudge the throttle... the great reserve for a burst ahead in case of necessity.

And be happy, as you can't help being, with the scores and scores of other wonderful things about this magnificent car—its easy, relaxing ride, for instance... its distinguished and inspiring beauty... its rich, luxurious interiors... its honored and respected name... and its truly amazing economy.

Yes—there is so much about a Cadillac to inspire and delight its owner that he doesn't need the additional thrill of unleashing its spectacular performance when it isn't necessary.

So that's why we're sure he'll "Tread lightly!" He isn't in competition with anyone.

Downward Trend Traffic Deaths Noted in State

Harrisburg—Traffic fatalities in Pennsylvania turned downward in December 1952 in comparison with same month in 1951 but state officials had their fingers crossed an annual comparison pending publication of the December toll. There were 134 traffic deaths on Pennsylvania highways in November 1952 against 151 in November 1951 and eight deaths on the Turnpike in November 1952 against six in November 1951. As a result there were 1471 traffic fatalities in the first 11 months of 1952 against 1479 in the corresponding period of 1951, a decrease of eight. Actually the highway toll shows a decline of 26 deaths this year: an increase of 18 from 61 to 79 in Turnpike deaths, reduced the margin to eight. A cheering note was the decline of 46 in pedestrian fatalities in 1952. In the first eleven months there were 436 pedestrians led on highways and streets against 482 in the corresponding period of 1951. The Bureau of Highway Safety, however, sounded this note of warning: "Indications so far this year seem to point to a better year than 1951. But at this writing, unfortunately, early incomplete returns for the month of December paint much gloomier picture. With bad weather prevailing throughout the state during the Christmas weekend, the thronged highways produced a far surpassing number of fatalities compared to the Christmas week-end in 1951."

The Changing Landscape

RALPH G. ECKERT
Soil Conservation Service
Warren

Hello folks! This week another class of future conservation-minded citizens start their training in the Warren High School. There are several factors that are worth repeating in connection with this class. Warren as far as we know was the first high school in the State to offer a complete entire conservation course as an elective for students to choose if they so desired. Too much credit cannot be given to the school authorities for their foresight in seeing the long-range benefit that is to be derived from this type of training of the young and impressionable minds. Also the wholehearted effort and unselfish incentive that the Warren County Field and Stream Club has and still is putting forth in developing and backing this project.

The great majority of Warren Countians do not realize the vast influence that this type of training can and will have on the future of our county and the country as a whole as the movement is accepted and developed by more and more schools. It is the earnest desire of everyone connected with this course that all people will make a little extra effort to learn more about this little known subject of so vital importance to each and everyone of us. To the students who are taking the course it is hoped that they will exert the guiding influence, through definite knowledge, in helping improve and develop future conservation laws so badly needed to stop the waste of our rapidly disappearing resources.

As I drive back and forth through the county I cannot help but see the "signs of the times" on our fields in the snow. Are you and your fields mourning of a past era or are you talking and the fields wearing the "look" of the future? Is there the snow piled deep showing up gullies, or discolored with soil blown off bare areas in your fields? Are ice ponds forming where water has accumulated in low areas as a result of plowing up and down instead of across the slopes? Or are the gullies being stopped and healed by use of contour strip, diversion or good grass cover? Is the snow kept white as a result of using cover crops to stop the soil from blowing and washing by tying it in place during the winter months? Are diversion terraces, grass waterways or open drains walking the excess water from your fields safely so that you are not bothered with it on the erosion usually caused when water runs down over the slope. Let's all get busy until fields in Warren County wear the new look and speak the language of conservation. See you all next week.
